

A Case of the 10 days

Case 327

A seventy-five-year-old female presented in our hospital for genital itching and uncomfortable feeling. Our gynecologist found whitish erosion at vagina to perianal region. Our plastic surgeon made biopsy to check whether containing malignant cell or not. She took CT for further investigation (Fig.1).

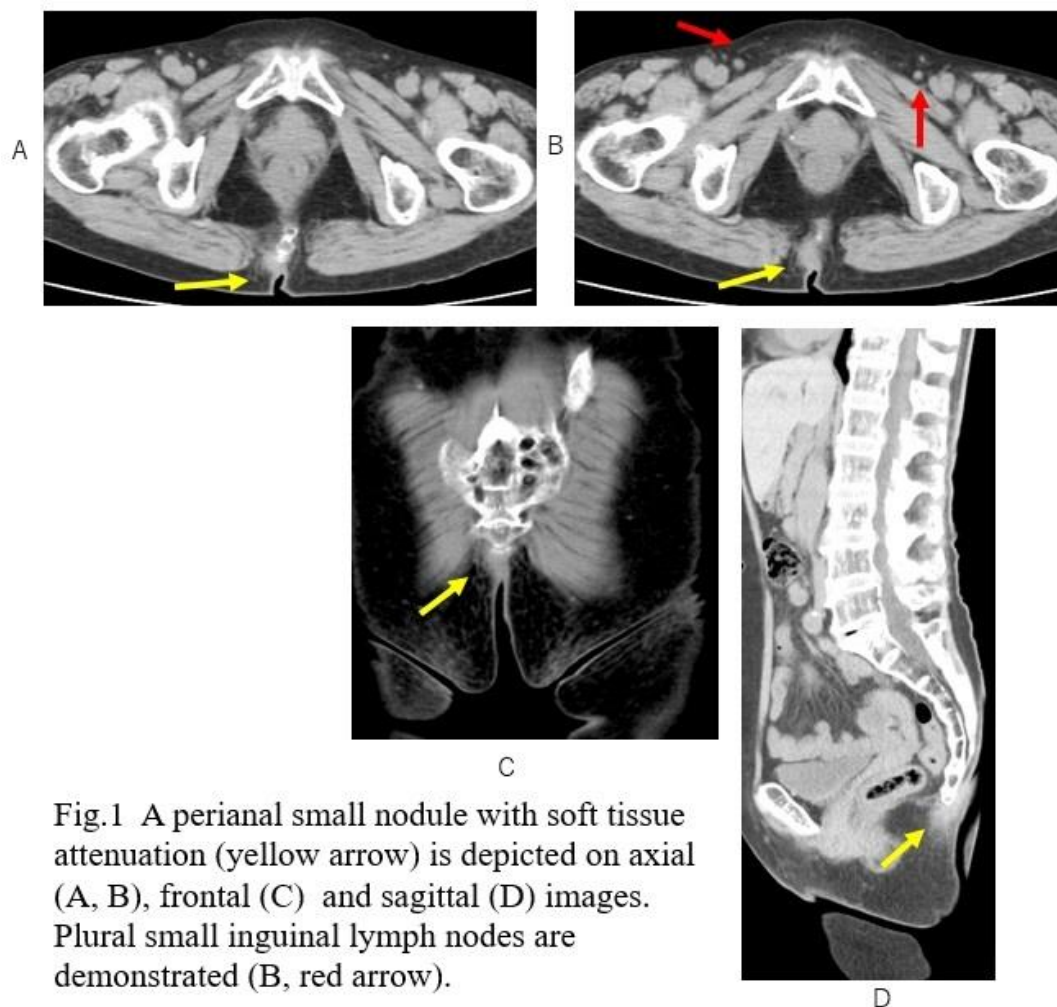

Fig.1 A perianal small nodule with soft tissue attenuation (yellow arrow) is depicted on axial (A, B), frontal (C) and sagittal (D) images. Plural small inguinal lymph nodes are demonstrated (B, red arrow).

What is the probable diagnosis for this lesion?

1. Extramammary Paget disease
2. Bowen disease
3. Malignant melanoma
4. Toker cell hyperplasia
